These are the four citation examples discussed in the lecture [1, 2, 3, 4].

Meza Ramirez et al. [1] state that [. . . (whatever it is that they state)]. Next we can point to the works by Indolia et al. [2] and by Lin [3]. Naturally we can also just cite a paper by its number without mentioning the author's name [4]. However, note that technical reports [4] are not normally high-quality academic references, cite them only when there is a very good reason.
